Introduction

This register lists, by state, all the National Recreation Trails designated so far by the Secretaries of Agriculture and Interior under by the authorities of the National Trails System Act (16 USC 1241 et seq.).

It provides information on types of trail use, surface, length, and seasons open to the public. Addresses of managing agencies are also given for obtaining additional information for each trail.

The National Trails System Act (originally passed in 1968 as Public Law 90-543) establishes a national system of trails, consisting of four types of trails: national scenic, national historic, national recreation, and side and connecting trails. National scenic and national historic trails may only be established by the Congress, while national recreation trails (NRTs), are designated by the secretaries of Agriculture and Interior.

National Recreation Trails today include a wide variety of trail types, uses, lengths, topography, history, and physical challenge. Such designation carries with it the prestige and recognition of being considered a component of the National Trails System. This may result in favorable publicity, community benefits, increased public opportunity for prime outdoor recreation, and even added protection for the trail corridor.

The process for designating a National Recreation Trail begins with the submission of an application form by the agency, group, or company with jurisdiction over the trail. For trails within National Forests, application is made to the district office. For all other trails, submission is made to the relevant National Park Service regional office. (See inside back cover for addresses of these offices).

The application must follow the format and criteria found in the National Park Service (NPS) handbook called "National Recreation Trails: Information and Application Procedures for Designation." This handbook is available from all NPS regional offices. The application is processed within the National Park Service, with recommendations to the Secretary of the Interior.

As the Nation's principal conservation agency, the Department of the Interior has responsibility for most of our nationally-owned public lands and natural and cultural resources. This includes fostering wise use of our land and water resources, protecting our fish and wildlife, preserving the environmental and cultural values of our national parks and historical places, and providing for the enjoyment of life through outdoor recreation. The Department assesses our energy and mineral resources and works to assure that their development is in the best interests of all our people. The Department also promotes the goals of the Take Pride in America campaign by encouraging stewardship and citizen responsibility for the public lands and promoting citizen participation in their care. The Department also has a major responsibility for American Indian reservation communities and for people who live in Island Territories under U.S. Administration.
