

SUITABILITY/FEASIBILITY STUDY AND STUDY OF ALTERNATIVES FOR PRESERVING AND INTERPRETING THE ORIGINS OF JAZZ IN NEW ORLEANS

JAZZ - A NATIONAL TREASURE

Jazz is internationally recognized as one of the most significant indigenous American music and art forms. In 1987 Congress designated jazz as a rare and valuable national treasure — "an outstanding artistic model of individual expression and democratic cooperation within the creative process, thus fulfilling the highest ideals and aspirations of our republic" (Concurrent Resolution 57). New Orleans is acknowledged as the birthplace of jazz; in and around that city, cultural and musical elements blended to form the unique American music that became known as New Orleans jazz. The crescent city was the birthplace of major pioneer jazz artists, such as Jelly Roll Morton, Sidney Bechet, and Louis Armstrong, who through performances and recording carried their music to a worldwide audience. Although jazz has evolved over the years, its early expressive styles are still very much appreciated and performed, especially in New Orleans. Recent years have seen an impressive number of important and influential musicians produced by New Orleans' vibrant musical environment.

THE NEW ORLEANS JAZZ STUDY

In 1990 Congress passed Public Law 101-499, which recognizes the cultural and historical significance of jazz and its New Orleans origins. The legislation directs the secretary of the interior, in consultation with the secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, to conduct a study of the suitability and feasibility of interpreting and preserving the origins of jazz in New Orleans. According to the legislation, the study will

- identify and assess sites and structures associated with the origins and early history of jazz in New Orleans,
- explore new programs for public outreach, jazz education, supporting second line bands and the efforts of established jazz archives in the city, and preserving the contributions of social and pleasure clubs,
- consider establishing a new national park system unit, or adding to Jean Lafitte National Historical Park and Preserve, to interpret and preserve the origins of jazz in New Orleans, and
- consider alternatives for providing technical assistance to others involved in the preservation and interpretation of jazz.

The National Park Service, as an agent of the secretary of the interior, has assembled an interdisciplinary team to conduct the study.

| THE STUDY WILL | THE STUDY WILL NOT |
|---|--|
| Provide Congress with a range of alternative concepts for consideration | Be a detailed plan or action document |
| Explore the potential roles of the National Park Service and other entities in preserving and interpreting the origins of jazz in New Orleans | Prescribe actions that will detract from existing programs |
| Identify historic sites and structures associated with the origins and early history of jazz in New Orleans | Be involved with commercial theme park development |
| Identify existing and potential management and ownership of candidate sites and structures | Specify an acquisition program |

THE PRESERVATION OF JAZZ ADVISORY COMMISSION

A 15-member Preservation of Jazz Advisory Commission was established by Congress to advise the secretary of the interior in preparing the study. The advisory commission will work directly with the NPS study team throughout the study process.

The first advisory commission meeting was held on May 3, 1991, at which time commission officers (two co-chairpersons and a secretary) were elected and future actions were discussed.

PHASE 1 - INFORMATION GATHERING

To accomplish the purposes of the study, the NPS study team is gathering background information. The identification of associated historical sites and structures will be based on published material, including the 1990 study conducted by Earth Search, Inc., of New Orleans, which was jointly sponsored by the National Park Service and the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Foundation. Comments and information on sites and programs will be sought from individuals and organizations involved in jazz and its history, performance, archiving, and education, as well as from state and municipal agencies and the public.

The NPS study team and the advisory commission encourage your comments on the scope of the study and invite you to participate in the public meetings, to be held in August as described below.

PHASE 2 — ANALYSIS OF SITES AND STRUCTURES

Sites and structures identified in phase 1 will be evaluated for national significance based on established NPS policies and criteria. The following four criteria were adapted from NPS policy specifically for the jazz study. To be considered nationally significant, sites or structures must

- have an outstanding and direct association with the origins and early history of jazz in New Orleans,
- possess exceptional value in illustrating or interpreting to the public the origins and early history of jazz in New Orleans,
- offer superlative opportunities for study of the origins and early history of jazz in New Orleans, and
- retain a high degree of integrity as a true, accurate, and relatively unspoiled resource associated with the origins and early history of jazz in New Orleans.

Those structures and sites determined to be nationally significant will then be evaluated for their suitability for inclusion in the national park system. A significant site or structure will be considered suitable if it represents early New Orleans jazz in a way that is not already adequately represented in the national park system.

Suitable structures will then be assessed for their feasibility for public use, i.e., whether or not the site or structure can be protected and managed for public use.

PHASE 3 - DEVELOPMENT OF ALTERNATIVES

In consultation with the advisory commission, the team will develop a range of alternative management concepts and identify potential sites to accomplish the purposes of the legislation. Alternatives will explore historic sites and structures, interpretive performance and jazz education centers, and support for second line bands, social and pleasure clubs, and public/private archives.

The National Park Service recognizes that many candidate historical sites and structures are privately owned and that ownership is a sensitive issue. Various options to provide for protection and interpretation of sites and structures will be explored in the study, including cooperative agreements, local protection ordinances, lease-back arrangements, and preservation assistance, as well as fee acquisition.

PHASE 4 - REPORT TO THE COMMISSION AND CONGRESS

The NPS study team will prepare a draft document presenting and evaluating the management alternatives for interpreting and commemorating jazz. The advisory commission will review the draft study, and their views will be included in the final document that will be transmitted to Congress through the secretary of the interior. After consideration of the document, Congress may implement one or more of the alternatives, create a new action, or take no action.

HOW TO GET INVOLVED

Your comments are important to the study and can make a difference. The attached comment form is preaddressed and postage paid. Comments on any or all of the following topics would be appreciated:

- sites and structures associated with the origins and early history of jazz in New Orleans
- interpreting the origins of jazz in New Orleans
- providing interpretive performances
- providing for public outreach
- developing a jazz education center
- providing support for second line bands, contributions of social and pleasure clubs, and public and private jazz archives

Your comments, along with all others received, will be carefully considered throughout the study.

You may also wish to attend the August meetings, described below.

PUBLIC HEARINGS

The three hearings will be open-house style, and you are invited to come at any time during the hours indicated below. Additional information on the study will be available, and NPS planners and advisory commission members will be on hand to hear your ideas and concerns about the study. If you choose, your oral comments can be recorded; written comments will also be accepted.
